The Sailfish 245DC straddles the line between family fun and serious fishing. Dual consoles are excellent multipurpose boats, and the Sailfish 245DC is a perfect example why. It has the seating capacity for a dozen people to kick back and chillax, yet it also has the livewell capacity for dozens of live bait to mill around and wait for the ax. You can use it to tow water skis, or you can use it to tow trolling baits. And thrill rides are not a problem, whether you're running the kids across the Bay for lunch or the buddies to the next hotspot.

True, serious anglers won't get the 360-degree fishability of a center console, but short of that one trait the 245DC doesn't miss a beat, fishing-wise. The livewell in the corner of the transom holds 25 gallons, is lighted, dogs down tight, and has a clear lid for viewing the baits. The transom sports two flushmount rodholders to complement the pair in the gunwale, and there are four more on the hard top supports. Coaming bolsters line the cockpit. The fishbox in the deck is big enough to stow (almost) any striper, and while most folks will use the bow seating compartments for dry stowage, they are insulated and can be used for fishboxes as well.

FALL BOATING SEASON TIPS FOR AN AWESOME AUTUMN RIDE

Tips

In the Northeast, there's little better than the peak of fall, with the leaves changing and the cool crisp air. This time of year is a great time to get in some end of the season boating and see the autumn colors from a different perspective. While the fall boating season can lend itself to some spectacular views, there are a few special considerations to make before heading out in cooler weather.

Today's Forecast

In the fall, weather can change at a moment's notice. Checking the weather right before you head out is a great way to ensure you won't get caught in nasty weather. Smartphone apps can give you up to the minute weather even while you're out on the water, but it doesn't hurt to quickly check before you load up and leave the house.

Proper Attire

Along with the already changing temperatures, crisp fall air can feel totally different on a moving boat. It may also be extra chilly out on the water, so dressing for fall boating season is a little different. Bring an extra set of clothes or additional layers, keeping in mind you may need to contend with cold water. There's always a chance some the chilly water may splash up on you and you'll want to be prepared.

FALL BOATING SEASON TIPS FOR AN AWESOME AUTUMN RIDE

Tips

Boat Check

Your typical pre-boating inspection can be even more critical in the fall months. Before you leave, be sure to inspect the bilge pump, engine and all of your safety equipment. Floating leaves can block up intakes and create mechanical havoc out on the water, so some extra preparation is never a bad thing.

Skip the Booze

Many people enjoy a few drinks while they float around, and nothing goes better with fall foliage than a nice bottle of wine. But on chilly days, alcohol can thin your blood and quickly drain your body of heat, making hypothermia a real threat — much more than in warm summer months. Heading out on the lake for some leaf peeping is what fall boating season is all about. With cooler weather and cooler water, however, there are a few extra considerations that you may not think of during those hot summer days.

Keep up with the weather forecast, dress accordingly and make sure your boat is in good running condition before you leave the slip, and you'll have yourself a lovely autumn boat ride.

Report

The Conowingo Dam pool is providing some early morning striped bass action for those casting topwater lures. It pays to wear waders and cast as far as you can near the turbine discharges. The striped bass tend to be sub-legal but the action is fun and some larger fish in the mix make it all the more exciting. There is also early morning topwater striped bass action farther down the Susquehanna River and along the edges of the flats.

Trolling a mix of spoons, red hoses and bucktails is a more viable method of fishing for striped bass as the fish are spread out along channel edges and various knolls in the upper bay. Jigging is also productive when suspended fish can be spotted. There are some breaking fish being spotted but usually these groups are made up of 14-inch to 16-inch striped bass.

Fishing for white perch is a great way to enjoy some fun fishing in the tidal rivers and creeks or out on the bay. When fishing deeper waters, a bottom rig baited with pieces of bloodworm or grass shrimp is hard to beat; dropper rigs with small jigs can work well also. The Kent Island party boats have been fishing in Kent Narrows at times and this area is a popular spot for those fishing from the bulkheads. Casting small spinnerbaits along shoreline structure offers fun fishing on light tackle.
